A Club Discussion. "Now, ladi s, if I have left anything untold, or there is anything not quite understood. I are ready to answer questions."

She was the president of a woman's club and had just returned from a visit to the famous "Sorosis." She had been telling them want questions were discussed and what was the programme of the evening. There were a number of wemen present, and they had all been very much interested.

The president sat down in her chair and waited for questions. There was a silence for an instant, and finally a timid voice from the background said:

"I would like to ask a question. Was it—was it a dressy crowd?"

The president jumped up and said:

"I just want to tell you! Those ladies all had on the most beautiful bonnets One was a heliotrope velvet transned with gold lace. Thackerny's Dross and Gold.

Thackeray composed and wrote his novels on long note paper in the reest fermine handwriting. The manascrept he frequently took down to his publisher in the crown of his but, stopping on reale at the Carriel club to take lunch. His habit of composition was methodical. When writing "Philip on His Way Through the World" he told, with serie comic earnestness, of the necessity to was under of spinning out more chapters because it was necessary to put another story on his house at Kensington Gardens, and Pinhp must do the job. On that occasion he said, "Do you
